Regarding Incorrect Registration of Certain Substances for Chemical Products in Breach of the Chemical Substances Control Law

Kyocera Corporation (“Kyocera”) announced today that a registration error for certain Kyocera chemical substances was identified in breach of the "Act on the Evaluation of Chemical Substances and Regulation of Their Manufacture, etc. (hereinafter, the Chemical Substances Control Law)."

Specifically, an internal investigation identified incorrect registration of substances used in certain chemical varnish and resin products. After the error was reported to the relevant government authorities, it was deemed in violation of the Chemical Substances Control Law. The applicable products include 27 items, approximately 10% of all chemical varnish and resin products manufactured and sold by Kyocera.

Our internal investigation has identified no reports of harm to health, environmental pollution, or safety-related incidents caused by the products. However, the manufacture and sale of all such products will be suspended until the registration is correctly completed. Going forward, we will continue to seek guidance from the relevant government authorities and take appropriate measures against reoccurrence.

The financial impact caused by this announcement has not yet been determined. However, Kyocera will promptly disclose any expected critical impact on its financials if identified.

We sincerely apologize for any inconvenience and concern to those involved as a result of this oversight. Kyocera will continue to conduct preventative measures and make appropriate disclosures to fulfill its duty of accountability to customers and regain their trust.
